Cincinnati, OH July 2020: Queen City Skilled Care (QCSC) is pleased to announce that effective June 22, 2020 Jami Spivey, RN has been promoted to a Home Health Coordinator. Jami joins the ranks of two other reputable and experienced Home Health Coordinators, Diane Reed RN and Jake Burns.

Jami initially joined QCSC as a clinician in the field. Due to her stellar clinical skills and her effective communication skills Jami was quickly considered as a solid candidate for a Home Health Coordinator position. "It takes a special person, let alone a clinician, to fill a Home Health Coordinator's role," states Tony Izquierdo, one of the owners of Queen City Skilled Care. "This is a challenging and diverse role because you are expected to do so many things in any given day. They are the "face" of our agency and so much of our growth and reputation depends on these distinguished associates going "above and beyond the call of duty" on a daily basis," Izquierdo continues. "Jami is the perfect person for this role. Just like her colleagues, she lives and breathes "exceeding patient and client expectations" every single day", states Robert James another owner of Queen City Skilled Care and a Registered Nurse.

Jami began her home health career as a State Tested Nursing Assistant and then moved on to work in home health as a LPN. Jami graduated from Galen College of Nursing in 2015 and holds a license to work as a Registered Nurse. "I saw the opportunity in home health to grow as both a nurse and as a professional," Spivey states, "I consider myself fortunate to work with a group of people who saw something in me to give me this great opportunity," Spivey continues. Jamie and her husband live in Liberty Township and when they aren't working, she and her husband are busy raising two small children, travelling and playing trivia.
